To the Voters of Vermont. This year presents again to the votors of Vermont that highest privilege and duty of citizenship-the choice of officers to make and administer the laws. The concurrence of the national and the state election makes the privilege greater and the duty more far-reaching. This year, also, marking the onreaching. This year, also, marking the one hundredth anniversary of the Declaration of American Independence—the declaration announcing the principle of "government by the people"-should bring to every eitizen a sharper sense of the truth which alone makes that principle valuable to states.

The rule of an unintelligent mob may government by the people, but it can never be beneficent government. It is only honest and intelligent voting that secures honest and intelligent administration of public af-

Free government does not work automatically. The good results which it secures come through the ability of the voter to see courage to vote for it. If the voter is wanting in these qualifications the success of demagogues is made possible, and elections

That Vermont has bitherto escaped these evils is to be credited to the educated intelligence and the instructed moral sense of her people, and to her citizens we once more confidently appeal. It is impossible to separate the existing state and national issues, or to localize the interest of our September election; and there is nothing in the local canvass that requires it. The Republican state nominations are unexceptionable, and should command the support of every Republican. But the state election will have an influence as wide as the field of national politics. A Republican majority of THIRTY THOUSAND in Vermont in September, would be an inspiration and an omen of victory to Republicans from Maine to California! They look for it; they ask for it; and a full vote will satisfy their demand.

We cannot afford to allow our majority to be one vote less than its highest limit. The importance of the Presidential election leaves no excuse for the slightest indifference or the smallest neglect of duty. We need make no criticisms of the candidates of the democratic party. THE NEW LOAN.-The successful negotiation of the sale of $300,000,000 four-and-ahalf per cent bonds, on terms clearly favorable to the government, is a matter to be rejoiced over. The bonds are placed at par in gold, less a commission of one-half of one per cent on the $300,000,000. Among the parties taking the loan are the Rothschilds, sligmans and other representatives of for cigo financial interests, as well as a number of our own banks and bankers. There is, to negotiation-the amount of bonds actually keted in due time, under the auspices of the kind of men who have the matter in hand.
